RELATIVES MAY FIND OUT ABOUT PRISON CAMPS

Prisoners Aid Gives Families Of Internees Descriptions Of Camps

For relatives of servicemen known to be German prisoners, the War Prisoners Aid, a division of the National War Fund, can prove a godsend in providing information about the prison camp where their loved ones are interned.

Relatives may write to the War Prisoners Aid, 347 Madison Avenue, New York City, giving the name of the camp in which the serviceman is stationed and they will receive a complete description of the camp, the facilities it offers, the location, the number of prisoners interned there, the entertainment available.

These descriptions are made by neutral representatives, largely Swiss, who visit the camp and cable reports back to the headquarters in New York. In some cases, the representatives visit certain prisoners if they are requested to do so and cable a report on their welfare.

All this is made possible by contributions to the National War Fund. Of each dollar contributed, 61 cents goes to benefit United States servicemen—and War Prisoners Aid is one of the most important phases of servicemen's benefit.

House to house canvassing in the National War Fund drive will not begin until October 16. The goal for Fayette County is $24,900.

COLLETT CASE ONLY ONE HERE TUESDAY

Decision Not Expected for Sometime

When the Court of Appeals convenes in the Common Pleas Court room Tuesday morning, the James W. Collett triple murder case will be the only one coming before the three judges who form the court.

Sessions of the Court of Appeals are open to the public, but there will probably be little of interest to the layman. So far as known no oral testimony will be taken. Indications are that the case will be submitted in briefs and on the record of the trial.

Collett, a well-to-do farmer of Clinton County, was convicted of the Thanksgiving Eve slaying of the three members of the Elmer McCoy family north of Washington C. H. The jury's verdict contained no recommendation for mercy and he was sentenced to be executed July 26. The appeal automatically stayed the execution but Collett remains in the death row at the Ohio Penitentiary where he steadfastly refuses to see visitors outside his immediate family.

The Court of Appeals is not expected to render its decision for some time. When it does, a new execution date will be set if the conviction is upheld.

URGENT CALLS FOR MEN TO MAN BOATS

Maritime Service Recruits Wanted at Once

Attention of Fayette County residents who are eligible for the Maritime Service is called to the urgent need for men to man the merchant fleets.

Maritime Service recruiting centers in Ohio and Michigan were ordered to remain open on Sundays until further notice to help meet increased quotas for trained merchant fleet crews it was announced today by Warrant Officer Ralph N. Cramer, enrolling officer in the Faller Building at 8th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Cincinnati Maritime Service office will be prepared to give immediate physical examinations and training station assignments to applications who are unable to appear during the week.

The full seven-day recruiting schedule is expected to net approximately 500 men a month from the Cincinnati area, Cramer stated. "Our greatest need is for youths 16 to 17 1/2 years of age, although we still accept men between 26 and 50, as well as those holding a 1-C or 1-A-L draft classification," he said.

In the conquest of nine southern Palau islands, marines and soldiers have killed 12,233 Japanese and captured 225 since they first landed September 15.

Tokyo claimed a surprise Japanese air raid on the Superfortress base at Chengtu in northwest China destroyed 44 American planes, including 23 B-29s. Tokyo said the attack was made through adverse weather which curtailed U. S. air operations.

Chinese troops prepared for a last ditch defense of the only remaining U. S. air center in southeast China at Kweilin.

Despite the loss of six advanced bases in recent months, General Joseph Stilwell reported the 14th U. S. Air Force sank 163,000 tons of enemy shipping, killed 4,000 Japanese and destroyed 42 planes last month at a cost of three Yank aircraft.

He indicated the Ledo and Burma roads would soon be joined to supply China through the back door despite the enemy's progress toward cutting China in two and blocking the coast to the U. S. fleet.

Chinese report some successes against Nipponese invasion forces in the vicinity of Foochow on the central coast, which Tokyo reported had been captured.

Burial in Indiana
His family said the body of the 52-year-old former public utility executive would be sent to Rushville, Ind., where burial will be in the family plot. The date of burial will be determined by the return of Mr. Willkie's son, Lt. (J. G.) Philip Willkie, USNR, now on convoy duty in the Atlantic.

Mr. Willkie died quietly in his sleep after three heart attacks. With him were his wife, a throat specialist, his personal physician, and his secretary.

Thousands of messages of sympathy deluged the family. President Roosevelt said:

"The nation long will remember Wendell Willkie as a forthright American. Earnest, honest, whole souled, he also had tremendous courage. This courage, which was his dominating trait, prompted him more than once to stand alone and to challenge the wisdom of counsels taken by powerful interests within his own party..."

Governor Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential nominee, commented:

"His death will be mourned throughout the world. A forceful and courageous man, he made a notable contribution to the political and philosophical discussions of these critical times..."

Political Questions
Mr. Willkie's death left without a definite answer one of the moot questions of the 1944 presidential campaign—which candidate, if either, he intended to endorse.

The Blue network last night quoted Henry R. Luce, editor of Time and Life, as saying Mr. Willkie "had no intention whatever" of voting for or supporting President Roosevelt. Drew Pearson had said earlier in a broadcast that Mr. Willkie had indicated in an interview "shortly before his death" that he would come out for the president.

Only a few days before he was hospitalized Mr. Willkie said in an interview with an Associated Press reporter that he had not yet made up his mind whom he would support in the presidential campaign.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

We can't complain about this being a blue Monday, what with the continued success of the American First Army in the Aachen battle and the great Russian advance in Lithuania.

Taking it on the whole (and knocking wood discreetly, just in case) things look very good for the Allies. We really are getting ahead with the job.

The most important news from the Western Front is that fair fighting weather, upon which we depend whether the Allies are able to force Hitler's surrender this year, smiled on the invading forces for a change at the week end. As a result British and Yankee warplanes swarmed over the Reich in one of the heaviest aerial assaults of the war. For the first time, too, we find the Germans labeling the Aachen show as a major assault.

Indications are that this Nazi estimate is correct. If it is, it means that things are going well enough in the Aachen sector to warrant General Eisenhower in regarding it as offering chances for a clean break-through of the Siegfried and Rhenish defenses. Certainly he is putting a lot of power into his punch at this strategic gateway which, though tough, will pay big dividends if it can be cracked without undue delay.

The question of weather can't be overemphasized at this critical juncture when speed is essential. It overshadows all our operations. For instance, we are utterly dependent on good visibility for efficient employment of our all-important air power, not only for fighting and bombing but as the eyes of the armies.

Then too, autumn rains and the awful mud which bedevils that part of Western Europe are a great impediment to the transport of supplies and to the mobility of tanks and heavy guns. The same thing is true of course, on the Russian Front. I've waded through the mud of west Europe, Poland and the Balkans and can label it as one of the worst enemies of attacking armies.

If Jupiter Pluvius is good to us for say the rest of October and early November, the Allies may be able to break through the Hitlerian frontier defenses into the heart of Germany, where fighting could be continued during the winter with air less difficulty. Should there be an early fall deluge in this year of weird climatic conditions, it might hold the Allies up until spring. In any event it would cause delay.

The ancient and famous city of Aachen (or Aix-La-Chapelle, as the French have it) is reported to be all but surrounded by First Army forces, and it's unofficially said that fighting is raging through the streets. The closing

PENSIONS READY FOR SURVIVORS OF SERVICEMEN

Widows and Children Are Eligible to Two Kinds Of Benefits

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of news items, ranging from demobilization to jobs and benefits.)

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—(AP)—

The government pays two kinds of pensions to survivors of servicemen and veterans.

Group One: Pensions are paid for death in the service in line of duty or for a veteran's death—any time after his military discharge—caused by a disability connected with his military service.

This pension goes to the widow and unmarried minor children.

Widows and children in this group are automatically considered dependent and therefore get the pension no matter how large their private income may be.

Parents of veterans in this group are also pensionable, if dependent, but in their case dependency must be proved.

Death pension rates in all these cases, paid monthly, are:

Widow without child, $50; widow with one child, $65 (with $13 for each additional child although the total monthly payment to widow and children can not exceed $100); no widow but one child, $25; no widow but two children, $38 equally divided, with $10 for each additional child;

of the gap on the eastern side of Aachen will put the Yanks astride the Nazi rail communication with the great Rhenish city of Cologne.

The plight of the fine old town of Aachen, which came through the last war without even hearing a gun fired in anger, well illustrates the point that the Germans, who have waged war against many countries but never before in modern times have experienced it at home themselves, certainly are learning what it means now. They're having a terrible lesson, due to Hitler's decision to sacrifice everything to save his own skin—a lesson which is bound to produce bitterness among them but which also is likely to create a healthy respect for peace.

Quite apart from the terrific aerial bombardment which the Reich is enduring the Nazi troops ruthlessly are destroying towns as they retreat—a scorched earth policy to deprive the invaders of defenses or resources. If the war continues in this fashion, Germany will be a land of devastation. Perhaps this will provide a salutary example for the world, at that.

dependent mother or father, $45; or both, $25 each.

Group Two: Pensions are paid for death of a veteran—after discharge from military service—who had a service-connected disability but died of some other cause.

The Veterans' Administration (VA) pays all death pensions. Its interpretation of group two—a veterans who had a service-connected disability but died of some other cause—is so liberal that almost any service-connected injury or disability will bring a pension to his family after his death from some cause not connected with his military service at all.

For example: Tom Smith, while in service, was shot in the hand. The hand healed, never bothered him again. Years after his discharge he was killed by a truck. There would be a pension in this case.

These nonservice death pensions go to the widows and children only. Parents are not eligible. But - this nonservice-connected pension can not be paid to a widow without children—or to an orphan—whose income exceeds $1,000 yearly, or to a widow with a child or children whose income exceeds $2,500 yearly.

(Thus widows and children in group two get no pension if their private income exceeds a certain sum specified above. But widows and children in group one get the pension no matter how much their income.)

The pension rates in group two are: widow, $35 monthly; widow with one child, $45 and $5 for each additional child; for one orphan (no widow), $18; two orphans, $27; three orphans, $36, with additional orphans $4 each.

This is seldom mentioned but is worth remembering:

The government will make a gift—called gratuity pay—to the survivors of any serviceman who dies while still in service from any cause not due to his own misconduct.

This payment is an amount equal to 6 months' pay at the rate received by the serviceman at the time of his death. It is not necessary that his death occurred in line of duty. This is paid by the war and navy departments.

SPANISH CLASS TO MEET EACH TUESDAY

25 Expected To Be Enrolled at Second Session

The conversational Spanish class, organized at the high school last Tuesday night, will meet at 6:30 P. M. each Tuesday for an hour's session, Miss Mary Elizabeth Wood, instructor, said today.

She reported 16 at the organization meeting and predicted a class of at least 25 Tuesday for the second meeting. Miss Wood explained the hours were decided by a majority vote of the class. For latecomers, Miss Wood said she will stay until 7:45 P. M.

The 15 week series will cost each participant $5 and, if interest is strong enough, the class will continue for the last semester of the year also, Miss Wood said.

She described the objective of the class as "purely conversational Spanish" which would prepare one to carry on enough conversation to be able to make purchases in Spanish speaking countries and to carry on limited conversations with citizens of those countries.

X-Ray in Time

Tuberculosis is still a danger in every city, town and hamlet in the land. It is particularly dangerous where numbers of people are gathered closely together as in many factories today.

The Anti-Tuberculosis League hopes to have every man, woman and child take a periodic chest examination. This would be prevention indeed. For the greatest peril is the fact that the disease is so insidious. It gets a start before the patient or his family knows it. Only too often, by the time he realizes that something is actually wrong with him, it is too late for complete cure.

Tuberculosis can almost always be cured finally and completely if it is recognized in time. Any program to X-ray every member of any group should be encouraged. If the lungs are clear, the person examined then knows it and it happy about it. If he has any trouble, he can get right at it and get over it.

Suggestions to Educators

It would be well if all American educators from primary teacher to college dean could read the words addressed to their profession by the Marine Corps' commandant, Lt-Gen. Alexander Vandegrift. For they state clearly and authoritatively the important part that schools must play in training a generation for active effort in the prevention of future wars.

Educators cannot do the whole job, of course. But they can have tremendous influence in teaching the frightful lessons of war when, as General Vandegrift says, many others have forgotten them with the passage of time.

"You will have to decide," the general points out, "whether to keep your appreciation of problems and obligations of real national security keenly alive and thus inspire others, or to let your interests slip until one day the whole matter has become remote and you trust vaguely that somewhere a few government and military officials are taking care of things."

This ever-present concern for peace should not, it seems to us, be left to the individual teacher's responsibility.

It might better become a part of educational policy, thoughtfully considered. The horror of war should not again be allowed to become a succession of facts in the history books, with occasional accents on heroism and forgetfulness of suffering.

The Reconversion Job

Along with the destruction visible now in so many parts of the world comes the "reconversion" problem. Industry of many kinds, now engaged in war production must soon change over to normal and peaceful industry. Plans are already being made along various lines in the big industries now working on war contracts. The problem, while very complex because of the great variety of materials involved, is evidently not going to be so difficult as has been expected.

Thus a survey in one of the big war-factory areas indicates that three-fourths

A One Job Man

NANCY, France—(AP)—Most men get new jobs in the Army, but not Cpl. Alvin Katz, of New York City. In civilian life, he was assistant head waiter at the Ritz in New York. Dogging the Gamblers

SALT LAKE CITY—(AP)—The lookout took no notice when a dusty truck pulled into the alley. A moment later a police sergeant clamped one hand over the man's mouth and other officers rushed through a back door, arresting 24 men on gambling charges. The cops arrived in the dogcatcher's truck.

Today's Horoscope

You have a clear, logical mind, if today is your birthday, good judgment and confidence in your own ability. You love children, like fun and amusement, provided it does not interfere with your business. You are just and loving in your home, and you will find real happiness in your married life. In your next year try to placate fractious members of your household, so that happiness will mature. Unexpected good fortune will come to you. You should use care in legal matters during this time, and in correspondence. Born on this date a child will be very ambitious, clever and industrious, but high-tempered, somewhat over-critical and sensitive. These traits may arouse the hostility of employers.

of the industries involved can reconvert to civil production without much trouble or loss. Many plants report that they can accomplish their change-over within a few days, with hardly more trouble than "using different shipping tags." There will be many real difficulties, of course, when VE-Day arrives; but the reassuring outlook is that they need not be so troublesome and costly as has been expected.

Appreciating What We Have

The peeks we are getting at the marvelous gadgets of the post-war world are exciting. But do you suppose there will be anything in the future as satisfying as these things are today?

The rows of fruits and vegetables grown and canned by members of your own family.

The beautiful labor-saving devices that were taken for granted until they could no longer be bought but now provoke such pride and satisfaction and loving care.

The family car—that has to last for the duration and still runs.

The pre-war two-way stretch girdle that still does its job.

The cleaning woman or cook who hasn't found her way into a factory.

A can of pineapple or of ketchup left over from the days before the point price soared.

A stalk of bananas hanging in a grocery. A pair of nylon stockings that still hold together.

A V-mail letter saying he's coming home.

They say the post-war world is going to offer us a lot. It will have to if it is going to give us much of a thrill as the simple things we have learned to appreciate since the war started.

The Rehabilitation of War Casualties

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

WELL, THE boys are coming home from the wars. And some of them come around and talk to me about their experiences—at least the medical officers do.

Some of them used to be my medical students—sitting there on the benches with such innocent, baby faces and black cynicism in their hearts, just like all medical students from time immemorial. My, my! the things they've seen, the places they've been since then—African deserts, English villages, coral islands in an empty sea.

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

They're very nice to come over and talk to the old man, though it's kind of like the fellow who was drowned in the Johnstown flood and when he got to heaven he began to tell his experiences to Noah. I was in the slogging war—none of your boy's wars. My general was John J. Pershing, and no braver man ever stood up in a uniform of a soldier of the United States.

Methods of Rehabilitation

Well, they have been through plenty, these returning warriors and deserve all the very best we can give them. Some of them, especially fliers, are pretty well broken up emotionally and why wouldn't they be? A keen, clear-eyed young medical officer was telling me the latest method they have of rehabilitating these men.

I suppose all of us stay-at-homes when we read the individual stories of what one or another of these men have gone through wonder how we ourselves would have acted if those horrors had happened to us. I hope I would have acted all right, but as I examine myself I honestly don't know. Some of the experiences are too inhuman to be conceived as in a state of civilization. No wonder that many, although they act with manly fortitude during the ordeal, have the memory haunt them until they are unfit for duty.

The particular group of which my medical officer friend was speaking had gone through such experiences and were in the state that I suppose is what we called shell shock in the last war. They don't want to talk and they don't want to associate with anyone else. They become morose and asocial.

A treatment which has proved quite successful consists in inducing a kind of twilight sleep, and getting them to talk while they are in this condition. It is induced by giving a mild anaesthetic, or at least an anaesthetic that can be controlled as to the amounts of its effects. It is pentothal sodium and is given in the vein with a hypodermic syringe. Just enough is given to break down the shocked man's reserve and allow him to talk.

He is led to talk about the experience that affected him so deeply and when once the flood gates are opened he talks freely. This has the psychological effect of bringing what was in his subconscious up into experience and after he comes out of the anaesthetic he talks it over and over with a sympathetic psychiatrist who is able to explain the mechanism of his experience, show him that they are not abnormal or nothing to be ashamed of. The treatment unusual as it sounds has had a large record of successes.

This is one of the methods in use for the mental rehabilitation of war casualties. Of course in the field of physical rehabilitation of maimed limbs, eyes and ears the most scientific and effective methods are now in constant use.

Besides this I am strongly in favor of rehabilitation in the way of education. These young men have had the most fruitful years of their lives taken away from them—years during which under peacetime conditions they would be getting a higher education. This defect should be corrected. And I do not mean entirely vocational training, but broad basic cultural education. Let us make G. I. Joe mean General Information Joe.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

F. C.:—Are motion pictures bad for children's eyes?

A.: Movies have no bad effects on the eyes of healthy persons. Nervous people may react by headaches to intermittence (although this has been almost eliminated with modern types of projector) and startling changes of light. A survey of 14,000 children as to any symptoms after watching movies showed that 69 per cent had no reactions of the eyes being tired and strained after watching movies and 25 per cent generally had tired eyes, the remainder feel their eyes tired sometimes after a movie.

M. D. N.:—Is the X-ray a sure test of tuberculosis of the lungs?

A.: It is the surest test we have.

CHAPTER FORTY

DAN NODDED with his mouth full of chicken as Russell told him that Anne was assisting Dr. Raynor in the operation. Russell kept urging him to eat and talk along. Dan had never seen him so talkative. It was almost as if he'd had a drink or two. He brought coffee and poured it out himself. "You see," he cried, "you didn't think I could even make coffee, but I can."

"You can make me feel good anyway, Rus."

"That's the spirit. But I've done all the talking and you haven't said a word."

Dan grinned. "It's hard to eat and talk. I gobbled most everything up."

"I'll get more. If it isn't enough, we'll drive to Weston. They have all-night lunch room. How about it? A drive will do us both good."

"I'd rather just sit, now I've eaten like a pig."

"Fine. Want to sit on the porch? We'll leave this mess and . . ."

Dan jumped up. "I'll clear up. You sit on the porch. I've got something to ask you and I want a chance to think just how I'm going to say it."

"Is it as important as all that?"

"It is."

Russell looked straight into his eyes. "If it's money, you don't need to ask. Just tell me how much. If I haven't got enough I think I can borrow it."

"It's money, too. I want to go—but that comes after. You go on the porch."

Dan knew how to clean up quickly. He had worked in kitchens in a dozen states during his wanderings. It was the way wanderers earned meals as they went to and fro about the country. It was only a few minutes later when he switched out the lights and went out to sit on the porch. Russell was smoking and looking out over the moon-silvered waters. Dan sat down beside him and in the silence a wave of emotion swept over him. "His voice shook a little."

"You're a prince, Rus, to treat me like this after—the way I've acted."

Russell offered a cigarette. "Don't run away again, Dan. I want to know. If you must go—you must. But I want to feel I'm at least making it easier for you."

Dan lighted a cigarette. "You know, Rus, there are parts of California where you can't smoke even in your own car. Some places in city limits, too. I know a guy who was arrested coming into Hollywood from the next valley. It's right, too. It doesn't rain for months and one match or smoldering butt could burn up whole mountains. It's all like a different world from here, Rus."

"You like it out there, don't you?"

"It's one place I think I could get a start if I went out there again. I—I know more now than I did. I think I've grown up a little. I needed a good sock in the jaw to bring me to my senses."

"You promised to forget that, Dan."

"Maybe it's better if I don't."

There was a long silence. Russell broke it finally in a quiet voice.

"You want to go to California, don't you?"

"I could get a start out there—if you'd help me. I don't like to ask, but . . ."

"You don't need to ask, Dan. I told you inside. If you put off starting for a few days while I arrange things, I'll go with you."

Dan sat forward on his chair. "You? To California?"

Russell laughed softly. "Why not? Lots of people do, don't they? We'll go out in the car and make a vacation of it. I've never had a real vacation. I'll only stay a while, but you can show me around and I can make sure you are all right out there. I won't be happy unless I am sure. And I know I can't make you stay here. You'll never let it in here. Nobody will ever understand you."

"I don't blame them, Rus. I don't understand myself always."

"Then you'll let me go with you?"

"Let you." Dan felt tears coming into his eyes. "Good Lord, you're doing everything for me and you're trying to make it seem as if I'm helping you."

"That's just it. You will be helping me. So let's call it settled."

"What about Anne, Rus?"

"It seemed at first as if there was to be no answer. It was more than a minute before Russell said in a small voice:

"Anne is not for me. If you saw her tonight with Dr. Raynor, you'd understand. I should have known all along. She belongs to him, of course."

Dan tossed his cigarette away. It lay glowing on the grass. "Are you quite sure she belongs to him? I think not."

"Laura told me."

"Laura doesn't mean anything. Laura loves you. She'd say anything to get you."

"Poor foolish girl. Dan I'm not worth getting and I don't love Laura."

"But you do love Anne."

Russell moved in his chair. "I must tell you, Dan. Loving Anne is madness. She's married. She told me so. Maybe she only means she's going to marry Dr. Raynor, but in any case it's just the same."

"A girl can get a divorce, Rus. That's what I wanted to ask you. What is the easiest way? And where is it easiest?"

Russell turned to stare at him. "You mean you're married, Dan?"

"I guess we can call it that. It was only a—joke."

"Marriage? A joke? Dan, what kind of a girl could have married you as a joke?"

"A very nice girl, Rus. I want to protect her in every way."

"Dan, I'll have to know more than that before I can help you. His tone was serious. 'I didn't know you were in trouble like that.'"

"It does seem funny. I always said marriage was bunk. Now I'm in it. I want to know, is there any way I can get a quick divorce so nobody'll know?"

"Except me!"

"You shouldn't know, either, Rus. It—it would only spoil things for you. Couldn't—couldn't we both just pretend it had never happened?"

"Certainly not. Don't you love the girl, Dan?"

"She doesn't love me. That's all that matters. I can get over it. She isn't my class. She's as far away from me as that moon up there. She always would be. She has a right to be happy and not let a failure like me get in her way. I—I'm sorry I spoke about it. You can't understand. I can't tell you any more."

"When did it happen, Dan?"

"Early this summer. I doesn't matter. He jumped up. 'Let's go to bed and forget about it. Now you may change your mind about going west for a trip.'"

Harper Meets Ohioans at New Guinea

EDITOR'S NOTE: Robert S. Harper, who began his newspaper career in Washington C. H., is now in the Pacific covering the war against Japan for the Ohio State Journal as an accredited war correspondent assigned to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command area. He left his position on the Journal editorial staff to go on the assignment. His reports are published in the Record-Herald through the courtesy of the Ohio State Journal.)

By ROBERT S. HARPER

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA—It is raining tonight in New Guinea.

There is no news in that, for they tell me it rains most of the time in New Guinea. However, most people exaggerate about the weather.

Our ship lies in the midst of grim, hard hitting naval craft of all descriptions. For the first time in almost a month, the lights blaze on the ship; port holes are open and there is smoking on deck.

On shore, dimly seen palm trees wave in the wind and clouds hang low, obscuring menacing mountains that look down on all sides except to the open sea. Blinker lights wink incessantly as the ships talk with each other. This is the last place I planned to see first, if you get what I mean, but here we are. How we got here is one of those mysteries that can be easily explained, but not right at this time.

So here we are and tonight it is raining. One might as well be on deck as inside, for perspiration pours from the gang playing poker and the boy who sits nearby playing records. In this land, your shirt sticks to your back like so much plaster and the perspiration runs into your eyes, salty and painful.

New Guinea lies like a green lizard across the top frontier of Australia, a haunting sinister and deadly place, but beautiful to look upon. Our first view of this tortured land was that of a mountain peaks rising high in the mists, each with a crown of fleecy clouds. The green jungle climbs clear to the top of these mountains, dark and dank and steaming hot. That old, worn out cliché, "the green jungle of New Guinea" is all too true in vividly describing this battle-ground.

As the ship drew into the lower bay, the pilot came out in a small boat, with two native boys sitting on the craft. They were typical Papuans, their beautiful chocolate bodies and their artificially colored red hair shining in the sunlight. These sturdy men wore bright green skirts, just a piece of cloth wrapped around them at the waist and falling below their knees. Each wore a white hankiechief (that is what it looked like) around their necks.

We had a party aboard just before dark. A group returned from shore with their arms full of coconuts and we cracked them with axes, drank the milk and ate the snow-white meat.

"We just picked them up on the beach. There's thousands of them," they explained.

They were Americans wide-eyed in wonder at obtaining something for nothing and they weren't used to it yet.

"A Guy From Columbus Is Looking for You"

Someone said to me: "A guy from Columbus over there is looking for you. He says he knows you." And I thought to myself, who in the world knows me in this jungle spot?

On a ship at the docks unloading mail, at 10 o'clock at night and in the apparently never ceasing rain, I found him. He was Norman Cohen, for years a favorite at Broad and High where his father, Nate Cohen, operates the big newsstand. I had climbed over the decks of two ships lying side by side to find him. He came forward with outstretched hand and I do not know who was happier over the meeting, he or I.

Norman, T-5, anti-aircraft, is married. His wife, Esther, keeps their home at 985 Remington Rd. Dark and handsome, with a small mustache, and bronzed by the equatorial sun until he is with- in a few degrees of being the color of the natives, he was a striking figure there on the slippery deck of the freighter under the brilliant floodlights that make it possible to work 24 hours a day in three shifts of eight hours each.

We talked above the roar of amphibious craft, ducks they call them, carrying the mail to the docks.

Norm and I used to eat our dinner at adjoining tables in Marzetti's.

"How'd you like to have a steak there right now?" he kidded me.

That was a subject too painful for us to discuss further, so we dropped it like a hot potato. Somehow or other, I'm always thinking in terms of food.

Early the next morning, the first person I saw trudging along the palm-skirted road was Norman, come to say goodbye to me, for I was preparing to depart for a new base. He wished me luck and we shook hands. Then he handed me his peaked fatigue cap.

"Here," he said, "you'll need this. I can get another one back at my quarters."

Proud of my new cap, I put it on and it just fit me. I have it on right this minute.

Meanwhile, I had run across other Ohioans. Two very young and self-conscious boys approached me. "We are from Ohio, too," they seemed to boast.

The spokesman was Robert Henry, 19, of Massillon, R. F. D. 2. He asked how Paul Brown was getting on as football coach at Ohio State. I informed him, of course, that Coach Brown had been commissioned an officer in the U. S. Navy and now is coaching the football team at Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

The other lad was Morris O. Drummond, 23, of Ironton. Morris said one of his relatives made a big name for himself playing basketball with the Waterloo Wonders. Both Henry and Drummond are in the Coast Artillery.

Washington at a Glance

By JACK STINNETT

(Last of four articles on presidential press conferences.)

WASHINGTON—Few men, if any, in public life have ever done a greater flip-flop in their relations with the press than Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

During his days as district attorney in New York, he was cautious, suspicious, antagonistic and even belligerent. Through his first unsuccessful campaign for the governorship of New York and his abortive effort for the presidential nomination in 1940, he maintained this attitude. In Philadelphia four years ago, while Wendell L. Willkie was holding open house for all comers, Mr. Dewey presented the closed door. It may have been then that Mr. Dewey realized that his contact with the people could only be through those channels of communication generally referred to as press and radio.

Washington newsmen date Mr. Dewey's switchover from the night when he dropped in to the National Press Club and spent an informal two hours tossing off a half dozen good stories (at that time he was head of U. S. O., and preparing to resign).

Gov. Dewey's first adoption of the informal news conference, however, was at Columbus, Ohio, two years ago this last summer when he was on hand for the annual session of state governors. That hot day he met the press in shirt sleeves, puffing at a cigarette in a holder only slightly shorter than President Roosevelt's. There's no way of telling now who was more surprised—Gov. Dewey or the newsmen—by the results of that conference.

Since then, Mr. Dewey has been as thoroughly news conference conscious as the President.

At Mackinac Island a little more than a year ago, when the Republicans got together to draw up their postwar policies, Gov. Dewey stole the show by the simple method of holding an hour-odd long news conference at which he answered every question or dodged a few by banter that left no comeback.

Since his nomination as Republican candidate for the presidency the governor has taken a leaf from President Roosevelt's relation—with the newsmen book and written into it a few innovations of his own.

The day after the wreck of the "Dewey special" on the west coast, he worked his way back through the train, inquiring after the health of every one and calling them all by first names.

According to all reports reaching here, Gov. Dewey has adopted the news conference—questions, answers and all—as thoroughly as President Roosevelt has.

Like the President, he sometimes

Married September 20
In Augusta, Georgia

Sgt. and Mrs. Robert R. Gault

Sgt. and Mrs. Robert R. Gault of Augusta, Ga., have been guests at the home of Sgt. Gault's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Gault of Jeffersonville, and other relatives here, for the past week. They stopped en route from Georgia, where Sgt. Gault has been stationed at Bush Field, to Lockbourne Air Field, where he will be stationed.

This is the first visit here made by Sgt. Gault's bride, the former Mary Lou Crenshaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Crenshaw of Augusta, Ga. The couple was united in marriage September twentieth at the home of the bride's brother, A. Cleue Crenshaw of Lumpkin Road, Augusta.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robert Taylor in the presence of invited relatives and friends. Attending from here was Mrs. Emil Porter and Mrs. Harold Aleshire.

For her marriage the bride chose a street-length ensemble of light blue gabardine with silace trimming. With this she wore an adorable blue feather creation, and combined black accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Helen Crenshaw, cousin of the bride, wore a black crepe frock with sequine yoke. She wore accessories of black, and had a corsage of red rosebuds.

The bridegroom was attended by Sgt. Horace McKinney, as best man. Sgt. McKinney was stationed at Bush Field.

The junior bridesmaid, Betty Claire Crenshaw, wore a pink wool jersey frock, a hat of light blue, and her corsage was of pink carnations.

An informal reception followed the marriage ceremony, and centering the bride's table was a large three-tiered wedding cake, flanked by tall white tapers burning softly in silver holders. Mrs. Will Masters presided at the punch bowl.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Jeffersonville High School in 1940, enlisted in the air corps July, 1940. He reports Thursday for duty at the Lockbourne Air Field, having been stationed at Augusta, Ga., for some months.

The newly-weds leave Wednesday for Columbus where they will establish their new home on Minnow Place, near Bexley.

On Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Porter entertained with a family basket dinner honoring Sgt. and Mrs. Gault, when an informal day

Browns Make Last Ditch Stand in Series

By JACK HAND
ST. LOUIS, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Lucky Sewell's Browns are ready for another last ditch stand today after a season of comeback successes but the Cardinals have them groggy, trailing 3-2 in games, and desperately needing a victory by Nelson Potter to stave off a knockout punch. Either Max Lanier or Blix Donnelly will attempt to do the job for Billy Southworth's National League.

Mort Cooper's 12-strikeout job in yesterday's 2-0 Red Bird triumph was a blow between the eyes of the Browns' title hopes and the series' largest crowd of 36,568 which came to cheer for the underdogs went home fearful that the end was near.
Despite the week-long assurance that St. Louis can't lose no matter which team wins, Brownie fans were still hoping against their better judgment that Potter would square matters today and Jack Kramer would take the big one Wednesday.

It sentiment still is working for the Browns, the boys with the dough aren't. The Red Birds are favored at 11 to 20 to win if Lanier pitches and the wise money is so sure it will be over tonight that no series prices are quoted.
Not since Howard Ehmke emerged from the shadows of the Philadelphia Athletics' bullpen to strike out 13 Chicago Cubs and set a series mark 15 years ago has a pitcher been able to fan 12 men in one game in the annual classic. Never before have two pitchers like Cooper and Genny Galehouse whiffed a total of 22 victims in one series afternoon. The old mark of 21 was held jointly by the A's and Cubs of 1929 and the White Sox and Cubs of 1906.

Cooper and Galehouse hooked up in one of those games that it's a shame anybody has to lose. Just as on opening day when the Browns beat Mort behind Galehouse, on two hits, the club with the fewest hits took the cake and did it on home runs.

Ray Sanders' clout atop the roof of the right field pavilion and Danny Lithwiler's long distance into the unscrambled past the 400-foot marker provided the only scoring of an exciting game.

GRAIN MARKET NEWS SUMMARY

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Wheat futures markets were weak from the start today, wheat and rye ran into stop-loss selling and the lack of demand was conspicuous in all pits.
Trade sources said part of the early break could be attributed to bears liquidating holdings accumulated Saturday to protect themselves from any price support action the government might take during the week end. Commission Houses also were on the selling side.
Opening
Late trading in corn and oats was light and prices were off more than a cent below the previous close and at times were off more than two cents. Market analysts said some of the liquidation apparently stemmed from the belief that recent reaction to government price support measures had been too bullish.
Rye broke to new lows for the day in the last hour and at one time was from 2 1/2 to nearly three cents lower. Houses with eastern connections were sellers. After resting orders for May rye at $1.04 had been filled the market dropped quickly.
Late trading in corn and oats was light and prices were affected by the action of wheat and rye.
Field wheat was off 1/4 to 1/2, lower than Saturday's finish, December $1.63 1/2. Corn was off 1/4 to 1/2, December $1.14 1/2. Oats were 1/4 to 1/2 lower, December $1.05 1/2. Barley was off 1/4 to 1/2, December $1.02 1/2.
